

Playground Funding Guide - North America

Introduction

You've made the first steps in helping your community become a happier, healthier place in your commitment to a new playground. Congratulations!

Your budget will be a major consideration for your project, and a playground grant (a financial gift from a government program, foundation, or corporation) could be key funding that takes your project to the next level, at no cost to you.

As your partner in play and fitness, KOMPAN has created this playground grant guide to walk you through each step of the process. Once you've got a thorough understanding and are ready to get started, scroll through the list of national and local grant opportunities we've gathered for you.

Soon enough, those applications will be on their way! Would you still prefer to have an expert by your side? Click here to find a local playground consultant waiting to help with your playground journey.

6 steps playground grant application process

The Six Steps to a Successful Grant Application

Start here to secure additional funding for your playground

1. Get the right experts on your side

We recommend getting your local KOMPAN playground consultant involved in the process as early as possible. We have extensive knowledge of the grant application process and can often guide you in the right direction in a timely manner. We can assist you with the fundamentals of the application, like project visualization and cost breakdown. Finally, consider involving the true play experts, the children, to hear what they'd like to see in their play space.

2. Bring in project collaborators

We highly recommend having a team around you for support during the application process. If you are applying for a playground grant for schools, getting your parent-teacher organization involved as the core team can be beneficial. We've learned from experience that nonprofit organizations are more likely to secure funding. Therefore, it's a good idea to have them along for the application process.

3. Decide on Budget & Design

The design of your project can have a major impact on your budget. Your consultant can help you set realistic expectations that still deliver the WOW factor you're envisioning with the playground of your dreams. Many grants would like to see the playground project design and a breakdown of costs. We're here to help you with both.

4. Start Networking

Networking is a great way to form relationships that can lend to business opportunities, and it certainly applies to the playground grant process. More stakeholders than you know can help fund your project, especially within your local community. Get in touch with local business associations or families and parent groups in the area, as they can all participate in the grant process.

5. Complete Applications

You've decided your budget and have all the details in place. Now, your playground project is ready to be presented to the stakeholders for the final sign-off. Once approved, you can start applying for grants. Make sure to go for multiple kinds of funds, as both the size and requirements of the grants will vary.

6. Get your grant money!

Don't be discouraged if every application isn't accepted! Applying multiple times for grants is not uncommon, so remember all good things come to those who wait! You've done the research and the work, so a playground grant should be on its way, and soon after, the playground of your dreams!
